Outside Looking In.

A new body of work presented at The Artist Project in February 2020. The outer chaos we create with adventure and life experience often forces us to seek out an inner core of quiet. My new work celebrates our instincts to vigorously colour outside-the-lines and then, just a minute later, attempt to connect-the-dots. There is beautiful chaos when my shapes and textiles sprawl across my studio table and then a joyful 'sigh' when I successfully weave them together to create a new work. It's so exciting when a tiny piece flips over, reveals some unexpected colour or pattern and then, all-of-a-sudden, the art problem is solved! Each stage of my creative process is cathartic, uplifting and playful. My artwork echoes happiness, intuitive game-play and the yearning we have to seek order amid the chaos.

Robyn Waffle's booth at The Artist Project in 2020

Robyn Waffle's work is influenced by her fascination with rug design, travel, architecture and interior spaces. She experiments with a rainbow array of materials that - when woven together - create dimensional worlds that celebrate the ancient craft of rug making and the unpretentious joy of personal expression.

Robyn presented her new body of work titled 'Outside Looking In' at The Artist Project in February 2020. The colourful collection of mixed-media collages was the beginning of a new creative process for Robyn, and she is currently working on a complimentary series due to release in 2021.
